INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SCIENCE JOURNAL

Vol. XV, 1988
Nos. 115–18

SUBJECT AND AUTHOR INDEX

Subjects

Adaptation and cultural transmission 239–254
Anthropology
biological, and human population biology 255–263
liberation, for the year 2000 of the 1990s, a new interdisciplinary impulse 211–220
paleo- and neo- 265–270
social and cultural, future challenges 193–202
in the twenty-first century 203–210
Artificial intelligence, knowledge extraction and human intelligence 63–72
Biology of the human population, paradigm for biological anthropology 255–263
Bolivia, development projects and the social sciences 297–304
Canada and the Third World: transnational networks in global development 383–397
Change
economic, political and cultural in the USSR 137–147
qualitative, in Soviet society: the role of the social sciences in achieving it 149–162
Chavchavadze, Ilya, role in social, philosophical and literary thought in Georgia 305–312
China, youth unemployment in 285–296
Cognitive neurosciences 73–83
Cognitive science
and education 21–44
towards a history of 7–19
and the mind–body problem 85–95
and psycholinguistics 109–120
Cultural anthropology, challenges for the future of 193–202
Cultural change and the social sciences in the USSR 137–147
Cultural dimensions of development 505–511
Cultural factors, their influence in neuropsychology and neurolinguistics 97–108
Cultural specificities
and modernity 443–457
modernity, modernization and 533–542
Cultural transmission and adaptation 239–254
Culture
and development: false dilemmas and real issues 513–523
and economy, modernization of Japan 459–467
Communication, whither the science of ? 423–430
Development
correlates of 271–284
cultural dimensions of 271–284
and culture: false dilemmas and real issues 513–523
global, transnational networks, Canada and the Third World 383–397
and growth 558–563
or modernity/modernization? 571–575
the political economy of 563–567
the political economy of, does it

INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SCIENCE JOURNAL

Vol. XV, 1988
Nos. 115–18

SUBJECT AND AUTHOR INDEX

Subjects

Adaptation and cultural transmission 239–254
Anthropology
biological, and human population biology 255–263
liberation, for the year 2000 of the 1990s, a new interdisciplinary impulse 211–220
paleo- and neo- 265–270
social and cultural, future challenges 193–202
in the twenty-first century 203–210
Artificial intelligence, knowledge extraction and human intelligence 63–72
Biology of the human population, paradigm for biological anthropology 255–263
Bolivia, development projects and the social sciences 297–304
Canada and the Third World: transnational networks in global development 383–397
Change
economic, political and cultural in the USSR 137–147
qualitative, in Soviet society: the role of the social sciences in achieving it 149–162
Chavchavadze, Ilya, role in social, philosophical and literary thought in Georgia 305–312
China, youth unemployment in 285–296
Cognitive neurosciences 73–83
Cognitive science
and education 21–44
towards a history of 7–19
and the mind–body problem 85–95
and psycholinguistics 109–120
Cultural anthropology, challenges for the future of 193–202
Cultural change and the social sciences in the USSR 137–147
Cultural dimensions of development 505–511
Cultural factors, their influence in neuropsychology and neurolinguistics 97–108
Cultural specificities
and modernity 443–457
modernity, modernization and 533–542
Cultural transmission and adaptation 239–254
Culture
and development: false dilemmas and real issues 513–523
and economy, modernization of Japan 459–467
Communication, whither the science of ? 423–430
Development
correlates of 271–284
cultural dimensions of 271–284
and culture: false dilemmas and real issues 513–523
global, transnational networks, Canada and the Third World 383–397
and growth 558–563
or modernity/modernization? 571–575
the political economy of 563–567
the political economy of, does it have a future? 485–497 projects and the social sciences: a Bolivian example 297–304

a question of properties, not change? 121–135 Development policies and growth: a global perspective 477–483
Dialectics and sociology: viewpoints of a Third World sociologist 173–180
Economic change and the social sciences in the USSR 137–147
Economy and culture, modernization of Japan 459–467 political, of development 565–567 political, of development: does it have a future? 485–497
Education and cognitive science 21–44
Georgia, social, philosophical and literary thought, and the role of Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
Global development, transnational networks, Canada and the Third World 383–397
Global perspective: growth and development policies 477–483
Global social sciences
Editorial: four decades at the service of 3–5 Growth and development 558–563
and development policies: a global perspective 477–483
History of cognitive science 7–19
Human population biology, paradigm for biological anthropology 255–263
Hungary, local influences on international relations 399–406
Industrialization in Latin America from the 'black box' to the 'empty box' 469–475 Intelligence
artificial, knowledge extraction and human intelligence 63–72
Interdisciplinary, impulse and the anthropology of the 1990s 211–220
International co-operation in the social sciences, the Vienna Centre 597–603
International meeting of social and human scientists (Unesco, Paris, 14–18 December 1987), report of 587–595
International relations in Hungary, local influences on 399–406
Internationality of the social sciences: the Norwegian case 163–172
Islamic thought, the problem of the person in 407–422
Japan
a case study in modernization 542–546
economy and culture: modernization of 459–467
Knowledge, the extraction of, artificial intelligence, and human intelligence 63–72
Latin America
a case study in modernization 546–551
industrialization in, from the 'black box' to the 'empty box' 469–475
Linguistics, some fundamental issues 231–238
Literary thought in Georgia and Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
Local–global nexus, perceiving, analysing and coping with 321–340
Local influences on international relations in Hungary 399–406
Local mobilization and world system politics 341–360
Meaning, mental representation of 45–61
Micro-spaces, power and regenerative processes in 361–375
Mind–body problem and cognitive science 85–95
Modernity
and cultural specificities 443–457 and the peasantry 567–571 modernization and cultural specificities 533–542
Modernity/modernization or development? 571–575
Modernization
Japan: a case study 542–546
Latin America: a case study 546–551 modernity and cultural specificities 533–542 of Japan, economic and cultural aspects 459–467

Neoanthropology and paleoanthropology 265–270
Neurolinguistics and neuropsychology, cultural factors in 97–108
Neuropsychology and neurolinguistics, the influence of cultural factors 97–108
Neurosciences, cognitive 73–83
Norwegian case: internationality of the social sciences 163–172
Paleoanthropology and neoanthropology 265–270
Peace movement, exercise in micro–macro linkages 377–382
Peasant studies and the rural world 499–504
Peasantry and modernity 567–571
Philosophical thought in Georgia and Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
Political change and the social sciences in the USSR 137–147
Political economy of development 563–567
of development: does it have a future? 485–497 Politics
world system, and local mobilization 341–360
Power and regenerative processes in micro-spaces 361–375
Psycholinguistics and cognitive science 109–120
Qualitative change in Soviet society: the role of the social sciences 149–162
Report of the international meeting of social and human scientists (Unesco, Paris, 14–18 December 1987) 587–595
Rural world and peasant studies 499–504
Science of communication, whither? 423–430
Social anthropology, challenges for the future of 193–202
Social and human scientists, Report of the international meeting of (Unesco, Paris, 14–18 December 1987) 587–595
Social science, should we unthink nineteenth century? 525–531
Social sciences and development projects: a Bolivian example 297–304 and the economic, political and cultural changes in the USSR 137–147 global, four decades at the service of (editorial) 3–5 international co-operation in, the case of the Vienna Centre 597–603 internationality of, the Norwegian case 163–172 their role in achieving qualitative change in Soviet society 149–162
Social thought in Georgia and Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
Society, Soviet, achieving qualitative change: the role of the social sciences 149–162
Sociologist, Third World, viewpoints on dialectics and sociology 173–180
Sociology and dialectics: viewpoints of a Third World sociologist 173–180
Soviet society, achieving qualitative change in: the role of the social sciences 149–162
Third World and Canada: transnational networks in global development 383–397 sociologist, his viewpoints on dialectics and sociology 173–180
Transnational networks in global development: Canada and the Third World 383–397
Unemployment of youth in China 285–296
Unesco, international meeting of social and human scientists (Paris, 14–18 December 1987), report of, 587–595
Unesco's role in social sciences, reflection on 575–584 USSR, economic, political and cultural changes and the social sciences 137–147

Vienna Centre, international co-operation in the social sciences 597–603
World system politics and local mobilization 341–360
Youth unemployment in China 285–296

Authors

AKE, Claude. The political economy of development: does it have a future? 485–497
AKIWOWO, Akinsola. Dialectics and sociology: viewpoints of a Third World sociologist 173–180
ALGER, Chadwick F. Perceiving, analysing and coping with the local–global nexus 321–340
ARKOUN, Mohamed. The topicality of the problem of the person in Islamic thought 407–422
BAKER, Paul T. Human population biology: a developing paradigm for biological anthropology 255–263
BELSHAW, Cyril. Challenges for the future of social and cultural anthropology 193–202
BERTONCINI, Josiane and MEHLER, Jacques. Development – A question of properties, not change? 121–135
BROWN, C. W. A new inter-disciplinary impulse and the anthropology of the 1990s 211–220
CAVALLI-SFORZA, L. Luca. Cultural transmission and adaptation 239–254
CHEKKI, Dan A. Transnational networks in global development: Canada and the Third World 383–397
DELHAYE, Patrick and d'YDEWALLE, Géry. Artificial intelligence, knowledge extraction and the study of human intelligence 63–72
DUBE, S. C. Cultural dimensions of development 505–511
ERSSON, Svante and LANE, Jan-Erik., Correlates of development 271–284
FAJNZYLBER, Fernando. Latin American industrialization: from the 'black box' to the 'empty box' 469–475
FENG, Langrui. Youth employment in China 285–296
FRIBERG, Mats and HETTNE, Björn. Local mobilization and world system politics 341–360
GALTUNG, Johan. The peace movement: an exercise in micro–macro linkages 377–382
GLASER, Robert. Cognitive science and education 21–44
HETTNE, Björn and FRIBERG, Mats. Local mobilization and world system politics 341–360
IMBERT, Michel. The cognitive neurosciences 73–83
JOHNSON-LAIRD, Phil N. How is meaning mentally represented? 45–61
KATIČIĆ, Radoslav. Some fundamental issues in linguistics 231–238
KAZANCIGIL, Ali. Editorial: Four decades at the service of the global social sciences 3–5
KHINTIBIDZE, E. G., SURGULADZE, A. N. and MINASHVILI, V. A. Social, philosophical and literary thought in Georgia and the role of Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
KLEIN, Philip A. Growth and development policies: a global perspective 477–483 KOVÁCS, Ilona. Local influences on international relations in Hungary 399–406

KYVIK, Svein. Internationality of the social sciences: the Norwegian case 163–172
LANE, Jan-Erik and ERSSON, Svante. Correlates of development 271–284
LAZAR, Judith. Whither the science of communicaton? 423–430
LOMOV, Boris F. Cognitive science and the mind–body problem 85–95
MATOS MAR, José. Anthropology in the twenty-first century 203–210
MATTOS PIMENTA PARENTE, M. A. de and ROCH LECOURS, A. The influence of cultural factors in neuropsychology and neurolinguistics 97–108
MEHLER, Jacques and BERTONCINI, Josiane. Development – A question of properties, not change? 121–135
MINASHVILI, V. A., KHINTIBIDZE, E. G. and SURGULADZE, A. N. Social, philosophical and literary thought in Georgia and the role of Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
MINAUDO, Vito S. Development projects and the social sciences: a Bolivian example 297–304
MORISHIMA, Michio. Economy and culture: aspects of the modernization of Japan 459–467
NZIMIRO, Ikenna. Liberation anthropology for the year 2000 221–229
RAHNEMA, Majid. Power and regenerative processes in micro-spaces 361–375
RAO, Shobini L. Cognitive science and psycholinguistics 109–120
ROCH LECOURS, A. and MATTOS PIMENTA PARENTE, M.A. de. The influence of cultural factors in neuropsychology and neurolinguistics 97–108
SCHEERER, Eckart. Towards a history of cognitive science 7–19
STAMATIOU, Willem. International co-operation in the social sciences: the case of the Vienna Centre 599–603
SURGULADZE, A. N., MINASHVILI, V. A. and KHINTIBIDZE, E. G. Social, philosophical and literary thought in Georgia and the role of Ilya Chavchavadze 305–312
TOURAINE, Alain. Modernity and cultural specificities 443–457
VAN NIEUWENHUIJZE, C. A. O. Culture and development: false dilemmas and real issues 513–523
WALLERSTEIN, Immanuel. Should we unthink nineteenth-century social science? 525–531
WARMAN, Arturo. The rural world and peasant studies 499–504
WU, Rakang. Paleoanthropology and neoanthropology 265–270
YAKOVLEV, Aleksandr N. Achieving qualitative change in Soviet society: the role of the social sciences 149–162
YDEWALLE, Géry d' and DELHAYE, Patrick. Artificial intelligence, knowledge extraction and the study of human intelligence 63–72
ZASLAVSKAYA, Tatyana I. The social sciences and the economic, political and cultural changes in the USSR 137-147